Mental Health

An officer observed a male subject stumbling while walking on the sidewalk traveling north bound on the Veterans' Bridge. The officer saw him grab the railing of the bridge and lift his leg up. He then placed his foot on railing as if he was going to jump off. Officers made contact and he displayed signs of heavy intoxication. He was detained as he laid back on the railing as if he was going to throw himself off. He was taken to the police department for further investigation into his welfare. He was upset the sidewalks were not cleaned of snow yet. Northwest Connections was contacted and he denied thoughts of suicidal ideations. He was taken home to where his daughter could watch over him.

He was taken into custody and a baggie of suspected methamphetamine was located in his pocket. He was booked into the jail for possession of methamphetamine, two warrants and felony bail jumping

Animal Call

A female caller reported the dog on Superior St was tied up outside without adequate shelter. Officer arrived and spoke with the homeowner. She allowed the officer to see the dog who was happy, healthy and playful. She was letting the dog in the residence as they were leaving the residence for the time being. Complaint unsubstantiated.

Animal Call

Complaint of a heeler outside not being cared for on Superior St. Officers spoke to the owners. The heeler ran over and began jumping on officers while wagging his tail enthusiastically. The dog appeared well fed and the owner told officers she fed him twice today. The owner said they let the dog outside for approximately 30 minutes to go to the bathroom. The owners brought the dog in for the evening. While the officers were still there, the dog ran out into the yard and began playing in the snow and his teeth, eyes, and coat looked healthy. There are no safety concerns for the dog.

The owners said their children can't even play outside anymore due to fear of the community members who are angry about the dog. The owner told officers a hysterical woman came to their back door and asked if she could take the dog prior to Officers arriving at their residence. The woman was identified. The woman was cited for trespassing after the owners said they did not consent for her to enter their property.
